CONTENTS OF VOLUME THE SECOND.

Page

The Sanitary Condition of the British Army, and especially the want of Space in Barracks. By W. A. Guy, Esq., M.B., Cantab. . . 1

The Chairman's Address, first Evening Meeting, March 15th, 1858 . 38

Reefing Sails from the Deck. By H. D. Cunningham, Esq., Paymaster R.N. . . . . 42

The Strategical and National Importance of Extending Railway Communication throughout the British Colonies, more especially throughout India. By Lieut.-Col. J. P. Kennedy . . . . . 62

The Submergence of the Atlantic Telegraph Cable. By Capt. M. S. Nolloth, R.N. . . . . 96

Practical Remarks on a few Points relative to Steam Vessels. By Geo. Biddlecombe, Esq., Master R.N., late Master of the Fleet in the Baltic 110

Improved India-rubber Cap Primers, and other Inventions. By Capt. Hayes, R.N. . . . . 116

The Leviathan Steam-ship. By Capt. E. G. Fishbourne, R.N. . . 117

Military Dietetics; or Improved System of Cooking for the Army, Navy, and the European Troops in India. By Mons. Soyer . . . 133

The Rise and Progress of the Minié Expansion System, and the mistaken Notions which it has unhappily engendered; including Remarks on the Rifle Projectiles of different Countries. By J. Boucher, Esq. . . 144

The Comparative Merits of the Rifled Small Arms of England, France, and the United States, with Remarks on the various Modes of Grooving Rifle-barrels. By J. Boucher, Esq. . . . . 160

India, as connected with a Native Army. By J. Crawfurd, Esq., F.R.G.S. 177

Floating Batteries. By Capt. E. G. Fishbourne, R.N. . . . 193

The Internal Communications of India. By J. Bourne, Esq., C.E. . . 207

Exhibition of two Models, the invention of Mr. Russell and Mr. Clifford, to illustrate the process of Lowering Boats at Sea . . . . 222

The Effect of the Modern Rifle upon Siege operations, and the Means required for Counteracting it. By Capt. Tyler, R.E. . . . . 225

The Principles of Military and Naval Hygiene requisite for practically Improving the Sanitary Condition of British Soldiers and Sailors at home and abroad. By Dr. Bird, F.R.G.S. . . . . 253

Gunpowder as a Disruptive Agent. By Capt. Schaw, R.E. . . 269

Coast Defences. By Col. E. Wilford, R.A. . . . . 288

A Mode of Constructing Cannon, whereby the strain produced by firing is distributed throughout the mass of Metal. By Capt. T. A. Blakely, H.P., R. A., M.R.I.A., &c. . . . . 304

Page
Exhibition by Capt. NORTON of Rifle Projectiles invented by him . . 338
Field Fortification. By Major F. GRIFFITHS, R.F.P.R. Art. . . 343
Lowering Boats at Sea. By W. STIRLING LACON, Esq. . . . 366
The Militia, and its Defensive Uses in the event of Invasion. By Col. ADAIR, Suff. Art. A.D.C. to the Queen . . . . . 379
The Military and Naval Uses of very large Shells, and the Comparative Powers of Shells in relation to Diameter. By ROBT. MALLET, Esq., M.I.C.E., F.R.S., &c. . . . . 407
The Improvement of the Rifle as a weapon for general use. By Lieut.-Col. LANE FOX, Gren. Gds. . . . . 453
Professor Magnus's Researches on the Deviation of Spherical Projectiles. By Col. YORKE, F.R.S. . . . . 489
Proceedings at the Twenty-eighth Anniversary Meeting, and Annual Report for 1858 . . . . . i
Address of the Right Hon. SIR JOHN PAKINGTON . . . . xvi
Statement of Changes amongst the Members during 1858 . . . xix
Tabular Analysis of the State of the Institution to 31st December, 1858 . ib.
Members paying Increased Subscriptions during 1858 36, 94, 191, 206, 303, 452, xx
Donations . . . . . 36, 94, 191, 206, 303, 406, xxii
New Members during 1858 35, 94, 191, 206, 303, 406, 452, xxiii
Presents received for the Library and Museum 36, 94, 191, 206, 303, 406, 452, xxv

ERRATA.

Page 35, col. 1, line 7 from foot, for 7th read 5th.

„ 37, line 7, for 1798 read 1598.

„ 37, read the last four lines thus:—

Plan of the Entrenched Position of the British Garrison at Lucknow, 1857.
India, Map of the North-West Provinces, including the Territory of Oude.
Plan of Canton. Secretary of State for War.

„ 40, line 4 from foot, for caution read exertion.

„ 43, „ 9 „ for Moon read Moore.